N.B. THESIS REQUIREMENTS
PhD theses may contain submitted or accepted publications plus 1) an introduction that gives the background of the research, summarizes, and links these publications, 2) a general discussion and conclusions section that highlights the main contributions of the candidate, the originality of the thesis work and its relationship to other research in the field.

To be eligible to submit a thesis in this "compiled" format, the student must have contributed substantially to at least 3 publications.
In all other cases, the candidate should write a stand-alone thesis, in which her/his work is presented in detail. To ensure the appropriate attribution of authorship, the contribution of the student must be stated clearly for each piece of work.
