An interior architect has a great sensitivity to high resolution, rich gradient, sensory overall experience, meaning and ornament.
An interior architect dances with time, moves lightly, follows attentively and leads curiously.

*Un architecte d'intérieur est très sensible à la haute définition, à la richesse des dégradés, à l'expérience sensorielle totale, à la signification et à l'ornementation.
Un architecte d'intérieur danse avec le temps, se déplace avec légèreté, observe attentivement et mène avec curiosité.*

Summary

'While we're young' studies the possibilities within the city of Ghent to create places exclusively for young people. Exclusive but with an inclusive character. The starting point is the investigation of a number of specific locations in the city. Students will explore the terrain, the specific issues or needs. Based on the study of different typologies studies will discover new possibilities and opportunities, in order to create a new or dreamed reality.

Instead of trying to solve problems or giving a technical or purely functional solution to a specific problem, students will be challenged to use their imagination as a way to open up and broaden the way of thinking and thus the design process.

We will shift from traditional ways of designing the public space - often limited to refurbishing, organizing the surrounding streets and traffic lines, focusing on one-dimensional appropriation, to a new paradigm, starting from the world of young people, in order to open the debate around a topic that is currently underexposed.

'While we're young' also refers to a defining period in one's life, often accompanied by major changes and intense experiences. In other words, it is a call to seize the moment. So let's have fun!
