To face the climate and social emergency, the construction sector must change radically, as does architectural practice. This studio examines the profession’s economic model, and how the traditional ‘office’ can be challenged by alternative forms of architectural practice.